"Patents, like science, build on earlier scientific and technological findings. Increasingly, the foundation for patents is coming from the scientific literature rather than the patent literature only...(our studies have shown that) information technology (IT) patents in particular are becoming even more dependent on scientific literature, and that the largest percentage of the literature reference in IT patents is published in IEEE publications."

For People, Not Profit.

Year after year, studies prove that scholarly journals produced by society publishers are priced nearly 65% below comparable for-profit journals, and well below even the average comparable not-for-profit journals.*
